Display Rendering Types

Depth Shading

In Depth Shading the value of each output pixel is a function of depth only. The depth of the first renderable voxel found along the ray path is used to determine the brightness of that voxel. Closer voxels will appear brighter than more distant voxels.